birds

listening to birds
makes me want to fly and now I can
have peace and fly
and then one day
a bird pecked me and I started to fly.

Today I am feeling a little nauseous, but excited for the class.
I don't know why I feel nauseous, but I do know why I am feeling tired. I was up all night trying to finish secret of the angles.

When we were told to find colors, I knew it would be easy.
I saw more than five colors, but I had five
fingers on my hand.
The colors I saw were the grey of my pencil, red
of the marker above, white of this page,
yellow of the front and back of this book,
and a green of a marker.
For the texture I touched this smooth page,
the sticky cover of this book, the sticky-ish texture
of my packet, and the smooth texture of the wood.

Chirp! chirp! The birds will not let me sleep I get out of bed and fill up the bird feeder again. The birds like on chirping "course" I say to myself. The birds need leave me alone. Not until fall comes out then they leave us alone. sometimes wish that the birds didn't love our house so much. But I still love them none the less.

Being here makes me feel happy. Being with my friends brings joy. The sun shines on my face like a spotlight, like I'm the center of attention. The breeze felt good on my skin.

It sounds out to me because it's not the full thing.

Shiff" went to bed as she lay in bed watching her class mates inside her body.

Being small means everything is BIG. I love the green hues of all the leaves. When I go near a tree I see so many shades of gold, some change, and some green mix.

The events of yesterday had me crying and sad. Although it made me sad, it also made me more pumped to do good in the world.

Being small means that everything is BIG! I love all the green shades that I can see up close on the leaves.
When I go near a tree, I see a bunch of different shades of brown.

Pop! fell on the floor. My friend did too. The breeze always makes us fall down. A samurai came over and ate me up. And then he spit me out!

Both grow on trees.

Found on
the ground

This stick is half bark half no bark.
How this happened is one day there was a terrible storm and lots of lightning.
This little stick was once on a big tree but that tree was struck by lightning during the storm and BOOM the stick went flying!
It landed but it was scorched by lightning
and so it stayed until I found it.
I like to call this stick
Half & Half.

Betsy Ant was trapped. On every side, tall, evil grass cornered her. Suddenly, she saw Thomas Antisson and Harriant Tubman playing. They've come to rescue me! Betsy Ant thought. But, nope. They were playing tag. She continued throwing my body at the grass, but it wouldn't break. I saw a hand and then everything went black.
